Tobacco Auctions Underway

Furniture that wood for e is "pre-

shrunk"? When it is properly dried, just enough moisture remains in it to make it compatible with indoor winter temperature and dry air. Some imported furniture cracks in heaves because the wood was dried to be compatible with the much lower house temperatures and the higher moisture content of the air.

Do you believe, along with many people, that furniture made from solid woods is always superior to veneered furniture? This is not always ture. Low, medium, and high - priced furniture is made in both ways, and much of the fine furniture today is of veneered plywood construction.

Furniture should be made of well - selected, seasoned wood to last and hold its shape. The frames are made of the hardest wood. Methods of construction and undercover materials are changing. For example, foam rubber is being used in place of springs, and the materials of cushions are chosen for the finished style line and the high look for upholstering.

The trend today is toward choosing related, light, scaled pieces rather than heavy, exaggerated proportions. The finish determines approximately 50 per cent of sales of today's furniture.

Shopping Manners

Your manners at the market are just as important as good shopping habits. In some cases, your manners will cost you money if they increase the store's operating costs.

If you follow a few simple rules of manner, you can reduce these costs and enjoy your shopping.

Avoid unnecessary handling of fresh fruits and vegetables. Cost of damaged produce is psassed on to you in higher prices.

As you go through the aisles, watch what you're doing and push the cart with care. If you need to leave your cart to go back for another item, park it where it won't be in the way.

When you change your mind about buying an item, always return the merchandise to its proper shelf. If you knock an item off the shelf, pick it up and replace it. Tell the attendant if you break a container or drop produce on the floor.

Getting produce weighed before you get to the checkout line will save time, both for you and for other shoppers. Place merchandise on the counter so the cashier can see the price and keep "two for" items together.

Complete your shopping before getting to the checkout line, so you don't need to go back for other items.
